Earnest Mr. Baxter Sparks climbed the hill out at the park yesterday afternoon with a young Galtling gun up his sleeve, and shot such a bewildering assortment of curves across the platter that the ruthless Red Sox never had a look in. In the sun, which had been sulking behind the clouds all day, became so interested in the twirler's performance that it came out and watched the game to its end, at which time the score board read: Richmond, 4; Danville, 0.

The spiked boots of the invaders, ready to cut up the earth all the way around the circuit, never so much as sullied the hallowed ground in the neighborhood of third base. Indeed, only three runners got as far as first without having to turn around again and go back to the bench from whence they came.

Only Two Hits.

Sparks allowed but two tiny hits, and never walked a man. He had all kinds of speed, and his curves broke over the bat as if they were made of steel. He held his position splendidly, and once robbed Stafford of a hit by bunting hits in the fourth and seventh innings, and with the aid of an error or two, Richmond won all the way.

A good-sized crowd gambled with the twirler's curves, and many a fellow showing his sporting blood. Many Danville fans were on hand early and another large delegation arrived late just off the train. The latter wore red socks in their buttonholes as nosegays. All the bugs made lots of noise until the fourth, then the pandemonium reared itself to the awful uproar of a pink tea. Never mind, Danville, there are two more games yet to be played.

The noise that the Danvilleites didn't make after the fourth was made up by the local fans. They worked all kinds of instruments of torture, which continually threatened to burst once ear drums. "Squire Jimmie has an eye to business, and will have ear protectors on sale to-day instead of score cards."

Many Features.

The game was full of spectacular features. Little Sandy Sandherr, for instance, got two three-base hits with his great big bat.

He was a whole show in himself. Hefty Bill Heffron was given all kinds of difficult chances out in his back yard, and fairly ate 'em alive. The way he scooped up Stafford's short fly in the fifth, falling down in doing so, which goes to show that he is popular away from as well as at home.

Sparks and Loos started out as if they were going to make it a pitcher's battle. Each fanned the first two men up, and the third on each side went out from second to first; a rather singular coincidence.

In the fourth net Heffron fanned, but Lipe swiped a dandy single down the left foul line, and then stole second. Kanzier flew out to right. Then Sieber (that is the way to spell his name) biffed a hot grounder to short. Lipe stepped over it, and Fisher let it get through him. The sphere chased itself clear to the fence, and Sieber circled the bases, Lipe scoring ahead of him. There was much joy among the Richmond fans. Sandherr followed Sieber with his clean three-bagger for three bases, but Titman died at first, which retired the side.

Titman, who was assigned to the first number on the program in the seventh act, singled to left of center, being sacrificed to second by willing Ison, who romped to second on Loos' bad throw to first, while Titman hied himself to third. After this Messitt tripped to the plate and dropped a short liner in centre field, sparking Titman and advancing Ison. Sparks fanned, but when Heffron went out at first Ison checked a run.

After Sandherr had secured his second three-bagger in the eighth, the ball bouncing over Tydemann's head, the entertainment ended. The program:

Will Pitch To-Day

The baseball game this morning will probably see either Howard or Chenault, the new recruit, in the box for the Lawmakers, as McKenize may not be in the heat of shape for the game. Manager Lipe is also anxious to have "Hoot Mon" in good condition for the Roanoke series, which will be a stiff one next week. Barring accidents, Revell is slated to twirl in the afternoon.

Centre Fielder Riggs quit the local team yesterday, apparently on account of super-sensitiveness. He claims that the newspapers and the public are against him. Riggs is a good player, but his place has been filled by an equally good man, Sieber, who is at his best in the outfield.

Doctors to Play.

For the benefit of the Sheltering Arms Free Hospital a team of Richmond physicians will play a team of Norfolk doctors at Broad Street Park on Tuesday, July 4.

The physicians here have a good team, and as the same is said of the Norfolk aggregation, a fast and close game may be expected. The Richmond team, which has been practicing regularly, is made up as follows:

First Base, Hoskin, Scott, Kellam, Williamson, Street, Hinchman, Brady, Saunders and W. H. Parker.

Dodson arrived from St. Michael yesterday, where he went to make all arrangements for the arrival and quartering of the fleet while in those waters. It is now expected that between thirty-five and forty entries will be made for the trip.

ELMORE HEINS RESIGNS AS ANDERSON'S MANAGER

Elmore D. Heins, who used to do the sporting stunts on a Roanoke newspaper, and who gave up his position to resume the strenuous life of a baseball manager, has sent in his resignation and will return to Roanoke to again re-engage in newspaper work.

Mr. Heins was manager of the Anderson team in the Carolina League. Luck has been breaking against the Anderson team recently, and Mr. Heins resigned as a consequence.

ROANOKE LOSE TO SHOEMAKERS

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
LYNCHBURG, VA., July 3.—Lynchburg bested Roanoke to-day in a loosely played and heavy hitting game by the score of 6 to 5. The local pitchers were hit harder, but the Shoemakers found Otey and Vernuelle in the pinches. The game was anybody's until King was put out at second in the ninth on a trick play.
